Meteor News: Unexpected Outburst of September Perseids (SPE) shower!
The September Perseids shower is not related to the famous August Perseids shower, except for its radiant, which is located in the same constellation of that of the biggest summertime shower. SPE shower is originated by an unknown comet, and usually reaches low ZHR at maximum. Typically, about 5 meteors per hour can be seen at activity peak. This year, close to the predicted time for SPE maximum, in the morning (UT) of September 9, a remarkable increase of SPE activity over its normal annual level took place. Read more at our MS-Propagationpage: http://www.mmmonvhf.de/ms.php

Hello to all our friends in the EME world from the K5QE contest team. K5QE will be operating in the ARRL September VHF Contest from EM31 and would really appreciate any contacts that we can make via EME for that "rare" grid. We will be calling CQ and running on 144.142Mhz - Second Sequence, so if possible please show up and work us. We will really appreciate the points. We will begin EME operation at 0230Z on Sunday morning and stop sometime after the moon sets for EU.

The W4NH (Fourlanders) Contest Team will be operating again from Soco Bald in North Carolina (EM85jm). We will be doing Limited Multi (50, 144, 222 and 432 MHz). Sorry for not having any higher bands but a couple of key folks are not available this time and our micro wave guru is busy renovating and moving to a new house. We will be operating 1 KW+ power on all 4 bands with stacked beams, RX preamps, etc. We should be loud so make sure you look our way on occasion.
The plan at the moment is to just operate CW and SSB but there is a chance we might have WSJT available. I am waiting to hear what the decision on that is. I will make another post if that comes to pass.

K9ZF/R Plans for the September VHF QSO Party
After the Greater Louisville Hamfest tomorrow, I plan to scout for a couple of new operating spots. I'll send an update this week if I find some better spots. But the basic plan is: EM77 and EM67 on Saturday. Somewhere south of Louisville, KY.
EM68 and EM78 on Sunday. In Salem and Henryville, IN, respectively

W3DHJ/r ARRL SEP VHF DM87, DM88, DM77, DM78
I hope to be out a'rovering in this weekend's contest. Right now it looks Real Good -- but, as always, events can overtake planning. >From the opening gun on Saturday, I'll do DM88, DM87, DM77, DM78 in that order - for 6-7-8 hours -- more if CONDX (snicker) warrant. I will rover out of my driveway late on Sat eve if there's prop. Big Deal: DM78 -- and Fat Chance: it's Sept. On Sunday I will do it all again. But, I'll be reversing the order: DM78, DM77, DM87, DM88. If interested please read more in detail at http://www.mmmonvhf.de/latest.php?id=1930
